Agro-Culture Scholarship Winners

Katrina Snyder of Prague, Oklahoma will be a freshman at Seminole State College this fall. Her goal is to study journalism and photography to communicate with farmers, ranchers and outsiders about agriculture. She is a 6th generation farmer from a small community and has been very involved in her local 4-H club. She has held the 4-H president office for the past 4 years and achieved numerous achievement awards and medals. She has also participated on the local basketball team, sign language club, Vision bank council, church youth group, "Locks of Love", designer and editor of www.snyderfarms.blogspot.com, American Red Cross, Young Republicans, coaching little league baseball, dulcimer band, family theatre, writing and historical re-enactment volunteer.

David Eickholt of Chesaning, Michigan is a junior at Michigan State University. He is studying for a bachelor's degree in advanced crops and soil sciences and plans to pursue a master's degree in plant breeding with a biotechnology specialization. He currently spends his summer working on the family seed farm and continues to participate with the local FFA chapter. During the school year, he is active with National Society of College Scholars and the MSU Presidential Club. He hopes someday to discover research to produce higher yields, farmer friendly usage and increased environmental safety.

Brenna Cross of Springfield, Ohio will be attending Ohio State University this fall as a freshman. She maintained a 4.0 grade point average at Shawnee high school. She was very active in her local 4-H club winning many awards and has held various offices. She was also involved with the academic team, national honor society, jazz band, exemplary writers, Farm Bureau youth leadership camp, National Federation of Music Clubs, swim team, and the tennis team. Brenna will major in environmental sciences with an intended minor in agriculture.
